Noblesville breaks ground on Midland Trace Trail

The REPORTER

Noblesville officials broke ground today on its first phase of the Midland Trace Trail, a 12-foot-wide multi-use path that will connect Westfield's portion of the trail at Gray Road east to Hazel Dell Road. The project increases Noblesville's trail availability and connectivity and accomplishes a goal of making the city more walkable.

"Our network of trails are becoming the arteries pumping life throughout our community by getting people outdoors, getting them active and getting them where they need to go without a car," said Noblesville Mayor John Ditslear. "This trail is especially important as it connects Noblesville directly with our neighbors. Through the Midland, residents can travel to Westfield and connect with the Monon Trail to Carmel and Indianapolis."

Joining Noblesville for the groundbreaking was Westfield Mayor Andy Cook and other city officials. The two mayors "passed the shovel" as Westfield completed its 3.75-mile portion in November 2016 that runs from Gray Road to Union Street. They are continuing their portion further west to connect with the Monon Trail.

"This is an exciting time for our two communities," said Cook. "The Midland connection with Noblesville will give our residents the ability to more easily travel between Westfield and Noblesville for generations to come. We are proud to join with Mayor Ditslear and his team as they begin this important project."

Bryan Clauson to be honored The bunny with IRMA historical marker or the egg?

The REPORTER

The legacy that Bryan Clauson leaves behind will forever be felt throughout the racing community and well beyond. To honor his memory, the City of Noblesville and the Indiana Racing Memorial Association (IRMA) have teamed up with the Clauson family to erect a historical marker honoring the racer.

Clauson traveled the country and the world in his Sprint Car and Midget racing adventures – including competing in the "Grand Daddy of Them All", the Indianapolis 500 three times – but Noblesville was the place that he always called home.

"We are so honored that IRMA came to us with this idea. Being able to put Bryan's historical marker in Noblesville makes it even better," said Lauren Stewart, Clauson's fiancé. "Bryan proudly called Noblesville home and loved everything about the community – from Courtney's Kitchen spaghetti dinners on Tuesdays to his Noblesville Millers. We are all really excited for Bryan to have a permanent mark in Noblesville!"

At 1:30 p.m. Saturday, April 8, the Bryan Clauson historical marker will be unveiled in Forest Park Shelter 5, 701 Cicero Road, as a lasting memory of Noblesville's talented driver. The event is open to the public and coincides with the finale of the USAC Midget Kokomo Grand Prix event, which will take place later that day. Indianapolis 500 broadcaster Howdy Bell will serve as the master of ceremonies. Speakers include Noblesville Mayor John Ditslear, Bob Jenkins, former chief announcer for the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Network, and Clauson's father, Tim, and fiancé, Lauren Stewart. The event also includes several USAC drivers, Clauson's Dale Coyne Racing teammate Pippa Mann and the Winchester Speedway Barber Shop Quartet.

The 90-Day Appointment or The Visit

By COURTNEY COX COLE

When you have a serious illness, the doctors set up an appointment every 90 days. This is not just a "normal" one hour appointment. For me it usually starts sometime around 12 p.m. and I usually get done around 4:30 p.m.

I am fortunate that with Stage 4 Cancer I have an incredible doctor, and I do not have to travel to one of the Specialized Cancer Hospitals such as MD Anderson in Houston, Texas, Sloan Kettering in New York, New York, or Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. My Doctor is partners with Dr. Einhorn, who has been instrumental in the treatment of Lance Armstrong's testicular cancer. My doctor's name is Dr. Nasser Hanna, and he and Dr. Einhorn specialize in testicular and lung cancer treatment. I have seen a lot of doctors, but Dr. Hanna has to be one of the best. He is one of those people that you actually feel better after you have visited him.

Fortunately, I participated in a lot of sports and I also try to read a lot of books. I say this because this background is great for enduring these appointments. First, I know I am going to get "stuck" quite a bit. Secondly, I am sometimes put in machines that are dark and very close to the head – you cannot be claustrophobic and get through this. I usually spend this time "thinking" about sitting on an amazing beach and having the sun shine on me and listening to the ocean. I really think one has to work on visualization to get through some of the "moments."

Sometimes the "intimidating" part is navigating through the big building and knowing that I am going to be shuttled through four to five different appointments and just being in the right place at the right time can be half the battle. Fortunately, they have information desks and these people can be very helpful. The main building for IU Health is large and I always get a bit apprehensive even though I now

This information can be critical in situations such as firefighters responding to a residence fire, alerting rescuers that there could be someone in the home that needs additional help escaping from the situation and raising awareness of hazards such as the presence of oxygen canisters.

Secondly, in the event of a widespread incident such as a hazardous materials spill or a destructive weather event which causes widespread damage and/or power loss, responders can identify an area through the database with specific addresses that may need priority assistance or special instructions on how to shelter in place.

"The world knew Bryan as a talented driver but off the track he was an even better person. He represented our city well whenever he was away and brought so much joy to our community as we watched him grow through the driving ranks and participate in some of the sport's biggest races," said Ditslear. "This marker will be a way for everyone Bryan touched to remember him and to serve as a model to the coming generations."

2001 Indiana Trails Study that provided valuable data to trail managers, trail advocates and the State of Indiana.

Volunteers are welcome to work along the trail individually or in pairs and will have a variety of 2-hour shifts from which to choose. Weekday morning, mid-day and afternoon shifts are available. There will also be a short training session at a time and date to be determined, approximately a week prior to the project. Registered volunteers will be notified when the training is scheduled.

"We're excited to learn about our trail users and how they use the trails we have here in Carmel," said Rachael Fleck, volunteer project coordinator. "Volunteers will help us a lot with the data collection in this groundbreaking study. It would be difficult to accomplish without them."

Those interested in volunteering for this project should register online at carmelclayparks.com/volunteer. There will be four, 7-day data collection periods in the months of April, June, August, and October. Trail counters will also be utilized along the nine trails to capture head counts. Data from the trail counters will be used to compare user patterns statewide.

James "Jim" Milton Childers May 4, 1941 - March 24, 2017

James "Jim" Milton Childers, 75, died March 24, 2017 in Sheridan, IN following a brief illness.

Jim's life will forever be cherished in the lives of his children: Son Jason Lee Childers (wife Julie Snethen Childers), grandchildren Josie and Justin Childers; son Guy Scott Childers (wife Anita Wallace Childers), grandchildren Jacob and Audia Childers, step-grandchildren Jared and Michael McVey, step-great grandchildren Liam and Gunner McVey and a myriad of wonderful brothers and sisters-in-law.

Jim was born May 4, 1941 to Chester Paul and Mary Florence Timmons Childers. He graduated from Sheridan High School in 1959 and went on to marry the love of his life, Monna Rose Olds in June of 1963. Early in their marriage Jim and Monna enjoyed going to horse shows and were inspired to become owners of several standard bread race horses. In the 80s, they owned and operated a horse supply business. Jim owned a roofing and water proofing company throughout the 70's and in 1970 went to work for Public Service Indiana (now Duke Energy) where he worked for 40 years before retiring in 2010. Jim's son Jason followed in his father's footsteps by becoming a line-man at Duke for which Jim was proud. Outside of work, Jim traveled the country for over 12 years with his good friend David Steele, racing sprint cars, silver crown cars and midget race cars. When he wasn't racing (whether it be on four legs or four tires), you could find Jim at his son Scott's body shop on Main Street or out running tow trucks. Anyone who knew Jim could see how compassionate of a person he was. This was evident by the way he cared for his wife, his family and his animals. Jim lived a full life and will be remembered as a loving father, husband and overall good

Exotic animals belong in the wild

By MADDIE ZOLA

Sheridan High School Student

The term "exotic" is ironically becoming less exotic. Nowadays it is becoming more and more common to see animals that don't deserve human contact attached to the end of a leash. As a person who admires natural beauty, it is concerning and disheartening that animals I used to only see in picture books when I was little are now in local captivity. I would much rather travel hundreds of thousands of miles away to see creatures thriving in their natural habitats. The uneducated public eye will see exotic animals such as: monkeys, lions, tigers, cheetah cubs, dingoes, wolves, foxes and many other creatures as "cute and fun to own."

People who adamantly search for and pay the ultimate price for exotic animals are being selfish and outright uncaring to the animals' needs and wants. Society today wants "what's new" and "fun." However, when reality hits and you have to carry legal documents and avoid certain areas that do not permit the animal to be within human ownership, what once was "cool," isn't anymore. Medical costs are higher because foreign animals need special medical care due to veterinarians' unfamiliarity with the animal. Although the creature has been forced into an unnatural habitat, it still eats the same prey which is most likely exotic as well, causing the price of food to increase. Not only will the animal not be able to adjust in the environment an owner has cruelly forced it in, the organism is stripped of its natural ability to interact socially with others of its kind.

There are so many cons to owning an animal meant to live in the wild. Emotionally, an animal can get depressed by being removed from the wild and placed into cities and towns with buildings and other animals it has never seen before. The importation of an animal can physically deteriorate its health and it can begin to eat irregularly and could potentially starve itself or become very sick. Behaviorally, those who are taken from the great outdoors will never truly lose their natural instincts, so that could induce anxiety and fear along with aggression. People, being self-centered and inconsiderate of these exotic animals, will blame attacks and harmful occurrences on the animal rather than what led up to the distress.

Just think about it: if people were to integrate unique creatures into our everyday lives, would we lose all form of respect for these animals? A parallel example to demonstrate this idea would be the value of money. If everyone in this world made enough money to supply their needs and wants, it would become useless. The value and drive to make money and have a budget would decrease almost into nonexistence. Similarly, if more exotic animals were to be incorporated everywhere around the globe locally, the admiration and excitement to see them would be gone.

I believe that the things we love most in this world should be kept in seclusion where they live and thrive most. So next time you think of buying that Fennec fox because it's "cute," think again. The purity and elegance of all exotic species should remain a rarity to humankind. We need to become more selfless and considerate, because after all, not only people live in this

Lessons from Betty Crocker, Grandma Janet

By JANET HART LEONARD

Leah is four going on fourteen. She thinks she can do anything her brother or older cousins can do. So, on Saturday evening Leah came to my house and we baked a cake. It's something I try and do with each of my grandmunchkins.

Little did Leah know that it was part of the growing up process with Grandma Janet.

We were making a Banana Pudding Poke Cake for our Family Sunday Dinner.

We began with a yellow cake mix. As Leah poured the dry ingredients into the mixing bowl she spilled some on the counter. Uh oh. I reassured sure her making a mess was part of the process and it was okay. We just cleaned it up. I told her that even Grandma makes messes.

Next, we cracked three eggs. We had to dig out a few shells from the yolks. Another, that's okay.

We measured the other ingredients into the bowl. Then Leah had the fun of helping Grandma use the electric mixer. When we had everything mixed together and poured into the baking pan, I handed Leah the metal beaters. I told her this was the best part, licking the beaters. It was a reward for doing a good job. She held both beaters and would lick one and then the other.

I realized she had Juicy Fruit Gum in her mouth as she finished cleaning off the batter with her tongue. That girl does love chewing gum.

Leah sat in front of the oven and watched the cake rise and was so excited when the timer went off. "Grandma, we can have cake now!" I told her that it had to cool and we had other things to add to the top. Banana pudding mix, bananas, Cool Whip and Crushed vanilla wafers. She was so disappointed. She wanted to sample her creation right then. I told her that it was for the family Sunday dinner and we needed to wait.

Leah's lower lip puckered. "But Grandma I need to try it now." So what did Grandma Janet do? She cut her a piece. And then I cut her another.

Did it really matter that a few pieces were missing on Sunday? No. There were three pieces missing. Grand Chuck walked into the kitchen and said, "Well can I have a piece?" Leah looked and me and I smiled and said, "Well of course you can, if it's okay with Leah." She said, "Grand Chuck, it's re-

On Sunday Leah helped me finish with the toppings and I announced to everyone that Leah had made the cake. Leah's eyes glistened with pride.

She had made her first cake. It was just another memory made with Grandma Janet. A simple cake. Many lessons learned.

It's okay to make a mess. You just have to clean it up. Everything has a process. You have to follow the directions on the box and do what Grandma Janet and Betty Crocker tell you to do. Patience is part of the process. There will be a reward when you help and when you wait.

Sometimes the reward is really sweet. Cake batter tastes just as good as the finished product.

Time with your Grandma is a Kodak Moment. I want my grandmunchkins to have lots of "remember when?"

So what if it takes longer to do something. So what if messes are made. So what if the cake is missing a few pieces.

It's just so much fun and a sweet memory for Leah. She has no idea what all she learned that evening.

And some of you have a new recipe to know where I am going (for the most part). I always have someone with me because it is a day of information overload, and it is good to have two sets of ears to hear everything.

I usually start in Radiology and the first thing they have to do is find my vein. Unfortunately, my veins are hard to find and this can result in multiple pokes. Most of the time they have a vein finder. This is a machine that shows exactly where your veins are located. When they have the vein finder, it is a low-stress day. Every so often the vein finder is in a different department. This causes me extreme frustration because I know this is when the "multiple pokes" can occur. One time I was poked so many times that I fainted - that was by far the most difficult time. I just hate it when they try both arms and then they go to the hands because they cannot find a vein. This is when I do my best to think about the beach and the ocean. The good news is that once they "find" a vein and are successful in drawing blood or putting dye in the vein, they can leave it open for the next appointment. In other words, they leave it open so I do not have to get poked over and over again.

I then go and see Dr. Nasser who will have my scan results for the chest and the brain (if it is done). I do not have the brain scanned every time - just the chest. He is always upbeat and will discuss the results of the scans and any side effects that I might be having due to the chemo drug that I take on a daily basis. I then leave Dr. Hanna's office and I have to get my bone shot which is on the other side of the building. The bone shot is to help strengthen my bones. It is a long day but I'm thankful to have this facility in Indiana.

Tragesser's homer sends Millers to victory

By RICHIE HALL

Reporter Sports Editor

With one swing, Bri Tragesser changed the game, and sent Noblesville off to Spring Break on a happy note.

The senior smacked a two-run home run in the bottom of the seventh inning, taking the Millers from a 1-0 deficit to a 2-1 victory over Cathedral Wednesday. With the win, Noblesville is now 2-0 for the season.

The Millers got behind after the Irish scored their run in the top of the second inning. and had to play from behind for most of the game. But Noblesville got going in the seventh. Emily Minett got on base first with a base hit.

A fielder's choice from Julia Furiak got her on base. Tragesser then hit a full-count pitch out of the park, getting Furiak home with Tragesser right behind her.

"I was trying to do my best to help my team out, do whatever I could," said Tragesser. "Find a pitch I could drive, and drive it."

Minett was 3-for-3 on the night, while Tragesser was 2-for-3. Before her homer, Tragesser also hit a double in the fifth inning. Noblesville had six hits on the night -Abby Brown singled in the sixth inning - and might have had more, had it not been for some spectacular Cathedral catches, including two from center fielder Mia Dittoe.

"It was one of those games where it felt like we were squaring up on quite a few balls," said assistant coach Matt Moore, who was filling in for Deke Bullard. "They made some good plays. Both defenses played really well."

Brooke Herron got the pitching win, with two strikeouts.
