SCAMS

As I watched the interview, I was surprised to see the cross section of educational and professional backgrounds of the victims – very impressive credentials. That tells me anyone is at risk and the scammers are eerily skilled at what they do.

Why don’t more people report the crime?

Possible reasons include:

- Seniors may not be familiar with “how” to report it. Many of these scammers are part of international crime organizations, so who would you call – local police, state or federal offices? Which office? That is a lot of wasted time on the phone and for what? To tell them how dumb you feel and relive the embarrassment? No thanks!

- Shame! You have to be really vulnerable to admit you made a mistake of that magnitude. Victimhood crosses all boundaries so your race, education, and wealth don’t matter to a criminal. It happens to all walks of life and the humiliation is all the same.
- Fear of losing one’s financial independence. Once the kids or loved ones realize the mistake, they will surely think you have lost it and need supervision.
- Finally, what good is reporting the crime going to do? There is no way I’m going to get any of this money back so why waste more time and feel bad during the process.

Why is getting your money back so difficult?

- Many of the scammers are part of international crime rings across multiple countries. That makes it tough for the U.S. to find and prosecute scammers.
- Crimes across state lines and international borders makes jurisdiction difficult as a result.

- Again, many victims are hesitant to report the crime.

Then, four weeks after watching this report, it personally hit home. My parents were scammed by a fake government tech scam and lost $4,000. It sent my parents and siblings into chaos.

What can be done?

Individuals are still the first line of defense in helping to prevent seniors from being scammed. Here are five ways consumers can help:

1. Regularly call or visit loved ones.
2. Block solicitations on every level – direct mail, credit opportunities and robo calls.
3. Provide respite for caregivers.
4. Set up financial safeguards.
5. Arrange for limited account oversight.

Look for the next edition of Senior Moment for a deeper dive on how to remain vigilant about protecting your privacy and not falling victim to scammers. In the meantime, if you or anyone you know has been a victim of a scam and would be willing to share your story with us, please reach out to info@haloseniorsolutions.com or call us at (833) 284-4256 (HALO) and share your story.

We can do more to protect our environment

There's this unfair perception that being a Republican means you don't care about protecting our environment and conserving nature.

The root word in "conservative" is "conserve" and it was a Republican president – Teddy Roosevelt – who first gave environmental issues national attention by preserving millions of acres of forests and park land.

"The nation behaves well if it treats the natural resources as assets which it must turn over to the next generation increased, and not impaired in value," Roosevelt said.

We're at a point in our global history where we must take decisive action to protect our natural resources and environment.

COLUMNIST
ADAM AASEN
Carmel Convo

For too long, both parties have failed Americans when it comes to crafting an actionable plan to protect our planet. Republican leaders must work together to create constructive, free-market environmental policies that can both boost business efforts while preserving our environment and reducing overall carbon emissions.

Here in Carmel, Indiana, we are happy to see more solar energy incorporated into new headquarters, mixed-use developments, and other new construction in our city. We continue to find ways to reduce carbon emissions by encouraging cycling and walking, and by building roundabouts, which reduce emissions by cutting down on idling at red lights. I also joined the Carmel City Council in voting yes to pass a climate action plan and create a commission to ensure recommendations are put into action.

On a national level, we must support congressional efforts to build clean energy infrastructure, which provides significant economic, national security, climate, and quality-of-life benefits.

Unfortunately, many infrastructure projects which are proven to improve our environment and satisfy our nation's energy needs without damaging our planet are being held up by government red tape. Permitting delays and lengthy reviews are slowing down a boom of clean energy projects that will create high-paying jobs and protect our environment.

Congress must continue working to ensure clean energy infrastructure investments, already approved through bills like the bipartisan infrastructure law, can come to fruition. Energy infrastructure projects included in that law are essential to addressing our country's supply chain challenges, improving grid resiliency and reliability, and meeting our energy and climate ambitions, all of which will bolster our economy.

Broader permitting reform can make future project approvals more efficient, predictable, and coordinated while increasing transparency and accountability and reducing bureaucratic friction. Without additional progress, net-zero emissions by 2050 will not be in reach.

On a city level, I'm hoping to continue to put our environment at the forefront of mind when it comes to voting on new projects. I've already spoken out about my concern about trees being removed when new projects are built. While I'm only one vote, I will continue to fight to preserve existing mature trees and ensure new trees are planted. Carmel has also been recognized as a "Green Community" by the Indiana Association of Cities and Towns and has been presented numerous awards and grants from various natural resource organizations regarding our Urban Forestry initiatives. But our work is not done. We must do more to protect our environment.

Adam Aasen is a City Councilor representing Carmel's Southeast District.

Letter to the Editor

Thank you from Duke Energy to all line workers & customers

Dear Editor:

To those who waited and those who worked: Thank you.

The storm that ripped through Indiana June 29 proved to be one of the most devastating to ever hit Duke Energy's Indiana system. It was followed by multiple waves of storms for several days that added to the destruction. Approximately 330,000 power outages occurred as more than 150 miles of power lines and more than 200 utility poles succumbed to the storms' violent winds. Only Hurricane Ike in 2008 caused more damage in our Indiana service area.

We're grateful to our customers who waited patiently for their power to be restored. Storms are rarely convenient, disrupting evenings, holidays, and weekends. However, they also have a way of bringing out the best in our communities. We brought in more than 1,000 additional workers to supplement our statewide workforce, and when they needed lodging or staging areas, Indiana University, Indiana State University, Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology, and DePauw University opened their campuses.

To those line workers, damage assessors, vegetation crews, call center representatives and others both at home in Indiana and outside our service area, thank you for your long hours and dedication. When it was most needed, you all answered the call for help.

As we put this storm in the record books and hope not to repeat it soon, we will long remember the way our communities and employees came together to respond.

Hill told The Reporter he plans to be a bold governor who does necessarily act along party lines and who will work to move Indiana as a whole into a leadership role in the nation.

"One of the things that sets me apart is that I'm willing to stand and fight against the status quo," Hill said. "I've not been a typical party member or someone that can be accused of being amongst the establishment ranks or amongst the in-crowd. I always have succeeded by hard work and moving in a direction that demonstrates the effectiveness of that work. I don't think we need a governor that kowtows or that plays the usual political sidestep games. I think in these times, we need transparency. We need bold leadership. We need someone that can direct the state and provide a national presence for our state."

Hill said he thinks Indiana is a fantastic place for people to raise a family and build a career, but there are things happening in our country, in our state, that threaten that type of hometown feeling. He specifically mentioned the loss of objective truth and the weaponization of justice on both a national and state level.

"What we're in a position to do, is to not make this business as usual," Hill said. "People, particularly in the Republican Party, talk about wanting to see change, wanting to get away from the same old, same old. Yet time and time again, many within the party don't do their homework and turn to the same policies or people to do the same old stuff and wonder why they're disappointed in the outcome. And I'm not talking about the need to be radical. I'm talking about the need to step up and stand up against ideologies that are absolutely shot wrong and not worry about stepping at anybody's tootsies. This is a country that's about free speech, and we need to get back to free speech and all that it entails. We have to embrace our freedoms, and that comes from the top. So this race is about genuine conservative values. That can be determined based upon what people have done before, as opposed to simply walking into a room and reciting a bunch of Republican bullet points."

Hill told The Reporter that if he were not going to run for governor, he would look for a candidate like himself to vote for.

"When it comes down to it, a person has to look you in the eyeballs and believe that you have what it takes to get the job done. And in my past, I was a prosecutor for a number of years. In my estimation, one of the most effective backgrounds for almost anything is being an elected prosecutor, where you have to make life-and-death decisions based on evidence, and then you have to support and defend those decisions. And I've taken that thought process and moved it into the AG's office, where we revamped how things were done there. And when we look at state government, layered with bureaucracy, the difficulty that we sometimes have with having a supermajority that is sometimes more concerned about not making each other look bad than doing the people's business. It requires having a leadership, a person in leadership in the governor's office that can provide the people with the type of transparency, with the type of empowerment that will allow the state to flourish. So if I weren't running, I would be looking for a person like me to serve in this capacity, because what I think that most people want is the same thing that I want. I want good, effective, solid leadership that I can trust."

Coming later than other candidates to this race, Hill calls his campaign a grassroots effort that is not based on the amount of money in his campaign account, but rather about his accountability to Hoosiers.

"It's not always the person who has the biggest purse," Hill said. "And I'm hopeful that it's really about the people who are able to connect with the people. This is a grassroots effort. I see this much in the same way as I see David and Goliath in terms of going against the giants, but with faith in God and five sweet stones. So from a timing standpoint, quite frankly, we're right on time. There have been people who have been engaged in this endeavor, engaged in the governor's race, that really haven't excited anyone. There's not a whole lot of excitement for this particular race. And that's a shame, because it's a big, big job. It's not a piece of cake. It's not something that you just go and do because you happen to be in line for it or expecting to do it. It requires a great deal of steadiness and grit to take on an executive level position where you have real responsibility. And from a timing standpoint, I think people are looking for someone to be enthusiastic about, someone to serve in a leadership role. And I think our timing is absolutely spot on. Absolutely."

Kismet? Serendipity? A coalescing of improbabilities? We don't know. What we do know is The Reporter's publisher just happened to be walking down the streets of Cicero Saturday afternoon when what to his wondering eyes should appear? A big black Suburban holding old friends drew near! With a local young driver, so lively and quick, Stu reached for his camera to snap a quick pic. Carmel FOP endorses Sue Finkam in mayoral election

Submitted

The Carmel FOP Lodge 185 has announced its endorsement of mayoral candidate Sue Finkam in the upcoming general election.

In a statement, Lodge 185 Vice President Matthew Broadnax explained the organization's reasoning:

Sue demonstrated her tenacity and drive for success in the primary election. She won a hard-fought campaign through prioritizing public safety, transparency, and listening to what Carmel residents want from their next Mayor. While working alongside Sue during this campaign, we have heard from numerous residents that crime prevention is their top priority.

Our city is constantly targeted by those who want to take what we have built. In the past year we have seen a 27 percent rise in thefts, 22 percent rise in motor vehicle thefts, and 20 percent rise in burglaries. We must stand strong to keep our community safe and protect our quality of life. The Carmel FOP remains steadfast that this community deserves nothing less than the finest police officers in the nation, through recruitment and retention.

Sue Finkam understands the need for a stronger police force now more than ever, so that we continue to remain one of the safest cities in America. Please join us in voting for Sue Finkam as your next Mayor of Carmel on Nov. 7, 2023.

Indiana Donor Network Foundation awards $2,000 scholarship to sister of local tissue donor hero

Submitted by Indiana Donor Network

Erica Freeman-Swaim's brother, Jarred, was 23 when he suffered a heart attack on Christmas Eve in 2022. He was kept alive by mechanical support until doctors told the family he wouldn't survive.

Freeman-Swaim with her family made the selfless decision to donate her brother's heart valves, veins, bone, and skin to help save and heal others. "Our parents always told us the best way to serve others is to give – give to others before and after life," she said. "Jarred did that."

Indiana Donor Network Foundation has awarded Freeman-Swaim a $2,000 scholarship. Each year, the foundation awards educational scholarships to deserving family members of Hoosier organ and tissue donors, transplant recipients, living donors and others. Recipients often become advocates for organ and tissue donation. The scholarships are funded by the foundation and contributions by Indiana Donor Network employees.

After winning the $10,000 MOKB Presents Battle of the Bands in 2020, Indianapolis soul rock sextet The Palace found its bigger plans put on hold by the pandemic. The band has since reorganized and is a mainstay feature of Indy Pride Festival after 2022 appearances at WonderRoad and All IN Music Festival. Fronted by flamboyant vocalist Ray Hutchins, The Palace has just released its long-awaited debut album, Rainbow Shades, with nine tracks exploring styles from rock to gospel to soul and, at times, the theater.

AG Todd Rokita & team make national impact by leading fight against "ESG" investment strategies

Submitted by AG Rokita's Press Office

Indiana Attorney General Todd Rokita's leadership of a 17-state effort opposing what Rokita calls the anti-capitalism and anti-consumer schemes of ESG investing has helped prompt action at the federal level.

"Our team here in Indiana works hard to protect liberty, free enterprise and the rule of law," AG Rokita said. "With servants' hearts, we aspire each day to defend the interests of individual Hoosiers across the state. And through collaboration with other states, we make a positive difference for all Americans."

In May, AG Rokita co-lead a multistate motion to intervene in the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's (FERC's) dealings with BlackRock, the world's largest asset manager. The attorney general says BlackRock has sought to force what he says is a radical climate agenda on American utility companies.

Following that action, a group of 11 U.S. senators has also demanded that FERC investigate BlackRock's actions – and BlackRock's CEO has begun backpedaling from the company's past record.

This month, AG Rokita and other attorneys general penned a letter to BlackRock Mutual Funds trustees warning them of potential deceptive and unfair acts and practices – and violations of state securities laws and state common law.

ESG investing seeks to impose an "environmental, social and governance" agenda that could not otherwise be implemented through the ballot box.

At least one of the 11 senators demanding the FERC investigation cited the 17-state motion to intervene as inspiring the senators' letter.

Rokita

Previously, BlackRock has signed onto activist crusades such as Climate Action 100+ (CA100+) and the Net Zero Asset Managers (NZAM) initiatives – which seek to coordinate shareholder voting power across their membership to influence the operations of utilities.

"Ultimately, the radical activists would force utilities to retire all of their gas and coal plants," AG Rokita said. "But gas and coal represent over 60 percent of America's electricity supply. Losing this energy would weaken our country and raise utility bills for regular Americans, including elderly Hoosiers on fixed incomes."

Further, he added, the ESG strategies diminish the value of retirees' investment accounts.

According to news reports, BlackRock CEO Larry Fink proposed replacing the term "ESG" with "conscientious capitalism" because of the negative perceptions of the former term.

"Whatever you call it, an investment strategy aimed at achieving woke left-wing outcomes rather than maximizing returns for investors is bad news," AG Rokita said. "There's no point trying to put lipstick on that pig."

Aside from the BlackRock example, AG Rokita has also led efforts against ESG investing in other cases – filing another motion to intervene in a case involving the Vanguard Group, for example, and filing a lawsuit against the Biden administration over a Department of Labor rule.

Indiana Donor Network Foundation awards $8,000 scholarship to daughter of local organ donor hero

Submitted by Indiana Donor Network

Ainsley Strothkamp enjoyed her sunny trip to Florida in December. She and her soccer teammates, coached by Strothkamp’s dad, Mark, played in a weekend tournament in Orlando.

“He and I always had a special and unspoken bond that was fostered from him being my coach,” she said. “He loved helping us develop on and off the field and sharing his passion for soccer with others.”

But two days after the family returned home to Carmel, tragedy struck. Mark suffered a massive stroke and after six days on mechanical support, doctors told the family he’d never regain consciousness. A family friend with them at the hospital asked if Mark was registered as an organ donor. They didn’t know.

“Thinking about donating my dad’s organs was just too much to bear,” Strothkamp said. Family members discussed their options and ultimately made the decision to donate. But they didn’t have to as Mark was already a registered donor. “He selflessly made that decision,” she said. “Being an organ donor saves the lives of others. It also provided a sense of purpose and gave us hope as a grieving family. It was comforting to know we knew exactly what my father wanted.”

Strothkamp has been awarded an $8,000 scholarship by Indiana Donor Network Foundation. Each year, the foundation awards educational scholarships to deserving family members of Indiana organ and tissue donors, transplant recipients, living donors and others. Recipients often become advocates for organ and tissue donation. The scholarships are funded by the foundation and contributions by Indiana Donor Network employees.

Those eligible for scholarships include both traditional and nontraditional students who submit an essay describing their career goals, experience with organ and tissue donation and transplantation, and personal goals.

“Although the heartache I feel seems unbearable at times, I know I’m lucky to have had a loving, caring and heroic father for 18 years,” Strothkamp said. “One day, I will be a successful professional who gives back to the community and spreads positivity.”

Strothkamp, a graduate of Carmel High School, will study engineering at Purdue University beginning this fall.

About the Indiana Donor Network

Indiana Donor Network’s mission is to save and enhance the quality of life through organ and tissue donation and transplantation. Its vision is to be a leader in organ and tissue recovery. Founded in 1987, the organization coordinates donation in 85 of the state’s 92 counties and serves transplant hospitals throughout the U.S. Despite age or medical history, anyone can sign up to be a donor at DonateLifeIndiana.org. The Danny Lerman Band (top) and The Bottom 40 (above) are the two latest groups to be added to the lineup for the upcoming Carmel Jazz Fest.

to play the Gazebo Stage at 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 12. The Bottom 40 is a high-energy funk, jazz fusion band featuring some of Nashville’s finest musicians. The Bottom 40 reimagines and “funkifies” familiar covers. If you like Dirty Loops or Snarky Puppy or even bands like Earth Wind and Fire you will enjoy this experience!

Michael Whittaker is a unique hybrid of his diverse upbringing. Growing up in Los Angeles, he listened to a diverse culture of music. He began studying jazz and classical piano at a young age. By his early 20s, he had already begun to mold his own identifiable sound and was one of Los Angeles’ most sought-after sidemen.

After attending UCLA’s school of music and majoring in film scoring, Whittaker has used his classical training and knowledge of orchestration to compose more than 300 television episodes and TV movies including the popular Power Rangers. Currently, he is independently scoring and producing for companies like Disney, Sony, NBC and Lions Gate Films. In 2011 his theme was chosen as the main theme of the new Disney Family Movies channel. His orchestration and keyboard skills have won him many awards such as the Telly award for his score to the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles series, Bank of America Musical Achievement award, International Association of Jazz Educators player excellence award, and the Clarence Brown Memorial scholarship for jazz.

TODAY'S BIBLE READING

This is how you are to build it: The ark is to be three hundred cubits long, fifty cubits wide and thirty cubits high. Make a roof for it, leaving below the roof an opening one cubit high all around. Put a door in the side of the ark and make lower, middle and upper decks. I am going to bring floodwaters on the earth to destroy all life under the heavens, every creature that has the breath of life in it. Everything on earth will perish. But I will establish my covenant with you, and you will enter the ark—you and your sons and your wife and your sons' wives with you. You are to bring into the ark two of all living creatures, male and female, to keep them alive with you. Two of every kind of bird, of every kind of animal and of every kind of creature that moves along the ground will come to you to be kept alive. You are to take every kind of food that is to be eaten and store it away as food for you and for them."

Noah did everything just as God commanded him.

Barbara Lou ("Rusty") Vicario

(Cartwright, Maliner)

August 31, 1932 – June 20, 2023

Barbara Lou ("Rusty") Vicario (Cartwright, Maliner)

passed away on Tuesday, June 20, 2023, at the age of 90 after a wonderful, generous, and long life. She was born on August 31, 1932, in Noblesville and was the daughter of the late Charles M. and Mabel E. (Skippy) Cartwright. She was predeceased by her brother, Charles Donald Cartwright.

She was a 1950 graduate of Jackson Central High School in Arcadia and attended the University of Colorado from 1950 to 1951 until she married Martin M. Maliner in 1951. She raised three daughters, Beth, Cici, and Amy, and was eventually the beloved grandmother to five and great-grandmother to one.

In addition to her early years in Indiana, she lived in Colorado, Pennsylvania, New Mexico, Arizona, Northern California, and Delaware. She enjoyed bridge, cooking, baking, entertaining, quilting, writing poetry, calligraphy, scrapbooking, Cape May, N.J., and serving others. During high school Barbara helped form a sextet of singers and remained friends with those women throughout her life. She joined Sweet Adelines in the 1960s and sang and competed with the choir and a quartet. Barbara was a dedicated Girl Scout leader in the 50s and 60s and may have had as much or more fun camping, crafting, singing, and serving than the girls in the troop.

During her professional life, Barbara worked as an Inventory Control and Purchasing agent for Atari and Qume, owned her own secretarial business for several years, bought and flipped houses, was department head of the word processing group for the city of Phoenix, and a purchasing agent for Hewlett Packard, and later was an Administrative Assistant at the Unitarian Universalist Church before retiring in 2007.

She will be remembered by all who loved her for her generosity of spirit – she was always baking, sewing, or making things for those who needed them – her ceaseless sense of curiosity, and her wit, which is memorialized in the many poems and verses she leaves behind. She imparted plentiful common-sense advice and countless recipes that will remain close to many hearts. She had an infectious laugh and laughed at herself and along with others, much to the enjoyment of all.

She is survived by her three daughters: Beth Maliner (Jeb Bartle) of Landenberg, Pa., Cici Palme (John Palme) of Leesburg, Va., and Amy Maliner-Killen (Scott Killen) of West Chester, Pa.; her five grandchildren: Sarah Bartle (Greg Van Houten) of Washington, D.C., Evan Bartle of Wilmington, Del., Jeremy Palme of Greensboro, N.C., Casey Palme of Leesburg, Va., and Ceilidh Killen of West Chester, Pa.; and her great-grandson, Ezekiel Van Bartle of Washington, D.C.

A celebration of her life may be planned in the future. If desired, donations may be made in her memory to Emmaus House of Newark, Del. (emmaushouse.net), where she taught sewing to mothers and children; My Stuff Bags Foundation (mystuffbags.org), or Friendship House of Wilmington, DE (friendshiphousede.org).

Honoring Hoosier hoops history

The Indiana State Fair is rooted in celebrating all things Indiana Agriculture, including the history of why the game of basketball grew here in Indiana. The game was affordable, and the playing season was based around farmers’ planting and harvest season in the late 1800s. After each harvest, farm kids could play basketball, and then when the season ended in March, they could go back to the fields for planting. Basketball also has a rich history at the fairgrounds. Indiana Farmers Coliseum has hosted high school championship games, the ABA-era Indiana Pacers, Indiana Fever Games, All-Star games, and more. Currently, the coliseum is home to the Horizon League Basketball Championships and IUPUI men’s basketball. The Indiana State Fairgrounds first opened in 1892 – the same year basketball was introduced in Indiana. Both are two great Hoosier traditions that have stood the test of time. The Indiana State Fair runs July 28 to Aug. 21 and will be closed on Mondays and Tuesdays. Visit the state fair’s website for more information.
